Cybersecurity in Financial Services

The financial services industry remains a top target for threat actors, ensuring that you have a robust security posture is key to overcoming today’s advanced threats.

Financial services are 300X more likely to be a target of a cyberattack than any other industry.

94% of observed attacks against the financial industry were malware-based.

70% of financial organizations experienced a cybersecurity incident within the last year.

The average cost of a data breach is $5.86 million.

Financial organizations including consumers suffer after a data breach.

62% of users are experiencing a performance slowdown on their workstations.

96.8% of threats are delivered by email in the financial industry.

36% of cybersecurity incidents in the financial sector involve insider threats.

Malware increased 46% in the financial sector in 2019.

74% of financial organizations experienced a loss of financial software and systems supplied by third parties.

The average annualized cost of cybercrime for financial services companies globally is now over $18.5 million (the highest of all industries).

Join the revolution and find out how we can help.

Contact us today.